The Extinction Rebellion Movement

The Extinction Rebellion movement is a global environmental movement that is fighting to stop the climate crisis. The movement uses non-violent direct action to raise awareness about the climate crisis and to pressure governments to take action.

Extinction Rebellion was founded in 2018 by a group of British activists. The movement quickly spread to other countries, and there are now Extinction Rebellion groups in over 100 countries.

The Extinction Rebellion movement has been praised for its creativity and its commitment to non-violence. The movement has also been criticized for its disruptive tactics. However, Extinction Rebellion activists argue that their tactics are necessary to raise awareness about the climate crisis and to pressure governments to take action.

The Role of Women in Extinction Rebellion

Women play a vital role in the Extinction Rebellion movement. Women make up the majority of Extinction Rebellion activists, and they are often the leaders of the movement's most successful campaigns.

There are many reasons why women are so active in the Extinction Rebellion movement. For one, women are disproportionately affected by the climate crisis. Women are more likely to live in poverty, and they are more likely to be exposed to environmental hazards.

Additionally, women are often more likely to be concerned about the future of the planet and the well-being of their children.
