Shaft Mar Sharpe's life has been a rollercoaster ride of adversity, triumph, and redemption. Born into poverty in the Bronx, New York, Shaft was placed in foster care at the tender age of two. She spent her childhood bouncing from one foster home to another, often facing physical and emotional abuse. At the age of 13, she ran away from the foster care system and found herself on the streets of New York City.

Life on the streets was harsh and unforgiving. Shaft was forced to rely on prostitution and other illegal activities to survive. She also became addicted to drugs and alcohol, which further compounded her problems. For years, Shaft struggled with addiction, homelessness, and trauma. She was arrested multiple times and served time in prison.

But even in the depths of her despair, Shaft never gave up hope. She knew that she had the potential to be more than a product of her circumstances. With the help of a social worker, Shaft began to turn her life around. She got sober, found a stable job, and started working towards her education.

In 2005, Shaft's life took a dramatic turn when she was discovered by a modeling agency. She quickly became a successful model, appearing in magazines and fashion shows around the world. Shaft's modeling career gave her a platform to speak out about her experiences and advocate for others who had faced similar challenges.

In 2012, Shaft published her memoir, "No Longer a Victim: My Journey from Foster Care to Freedom," in which she shared her harrowing story in the hopes of inspiring others. She has also become a sought-after speaker, sharing her message of hope and resilience with audiences around the country.
